I think that Microsoft should be able to conduct business as it sees fit. Microsoft has announced its plans all along to the competition who thought that their grip was enough to see it through. When reality struck they called foul. When they had Microsoft on the ropes and tied up in Federal court they forged alliances themselves trying to become the ruler of the computer/on-line worlds. To what avail? Allow Microsoft to continue to move ahead in its product development and desktop integration. Don't punish them for their innovation but rather allow the market place to dictate the direction of the marketplace and may the best companies win!
